Inexpensive Preparation.

The country seems to be thoroughly convinced of the necessity of preparing for war. Bills adding millions to the government expenses are appearing daily in congress and doubtless will continue for some time. These bills are necessary and the country must at an enormous expense construct and equip the manufacturing to produce an immense quantity of rifles, vessels and munitions of war. It should not hesitate to produce these necessities, however. We may not need them just now but we will be safer if we have them.

But there are other preparations this country should make that will not be expensive. The public of all classes should inaugurate a campaign of economy in its pleasure, its food and its clothing. Hundreds of millions are spent annually for luxuries that weaken rather than strengthen people. Denial of them now, before war is actually declared, would benefit the country as a whole.

Every citizen for whom it is possible should determine to become a producer of food products from the ground the coming season. He should as far as possible raise enough potatoes and other food crops to support himself and family. Utilize the waste ground about your premises or in your neighborhood and assure the country of an ample food supply the coming winter. If we should be at war then you will be assured of food. If we should fortunately be at peace you could determine to a much larger degree the cost of your food.

In these two directions at least preparation for war conditions would not cost the national government a cent but it would go far toward furnishing the nation sustenance in case of war and preparing its citizens for more efficient service than unaccustomed beverages and sweets can. If America would seriously begin to prepare along these lines a national strength that other nations would respect would speedily follow.

Our Detective Expenses.

The detective accounts of the biennial report of the state auditor for the period of June 30, 1914, to June 30, 1916, shows a total of $20,946.90. This seems a large sum and one's first conclusion would be that detective expenses had not been held down as carefully as they should be during the administration of Herbert G. Barber as attorney general. Such a conclusion would be incorrect.

Figures furnished us by an authoritative source show that during the year June 30, 1914, to June 30, 1915, the expenses authorized by Attorney General Brown from June 30 to December 1, 1914, amounted to $12,785.78; from December 1, 1914, to June 30, 1915, there were unpaid bills from the Brown administration and bills approved by the governor amounting to $4,582.70; and bills approved by Attorney General Barber from June 30, 1915, to June 30, 1916, the bills of $448.56. In the year from June approved by Attorney General Barber amounted to $7,135.47, and those approved by the governor amounted to $5,934.39. So out of the total of $30,946.90 for detective expenses for this biennial period only $7,584.92 were authorized by Attorney General Barber.

This is a very creditable showing for Mr. Barber and the state and reveals what can be done by a careful and efficient officer. It may be interesting to add the purposes of the expenses for the full year of 1916. For investigations of murder and assault with intent to kill, $3,410; for investigations of offense of liquor laws; $2,194.84; for investigating other crimes such as forgery, larceny and burglary, $2,800.20. We congratulate Attorney General Barber and the state upon the careful regulation of detective expenses by the present attorney general.

Homes Too Are Deficient.

The Fair Haven Era reproduces a letter of Dr. Frank Crane that appeared in McClure's Magazine for February in which he enumerates the disabilities of high school graduates. Among the things such a student cannot do are: Can't converse in German or French, can't keep a ledger in a store, build a woodshed, milk a cow, cut down a tree, put in a pane of glass, fry fish or make coffee. The closing paragraph reads: "I was educated according to the ancient formulas for producing a scholar and a gentleman, and I find I have to work for a living. I have no taste nor love for hard work, no habits of saving, no disposition to resist temptation, and no skill in doing anything the world is willing to pay for. I am wholly untrained for efficiency, and before I make good I will have to undo most that has been done to me in school.

The Era asks the commissioner of education to suggest remedies for these conditions. We feel that the remedies are not entirely in the hands of the educational authorities. We deplore the production of boys educated to be a gentleman but who are unable to support themselves as gentlemen, but it is not wholly the teaching of the schools. Fathers and mothers give an impression that manual labor is to be avoided if possible. The schools cannot teach the practical things enumerated above. These should be taught in the home and the shop, and only parents realize this and perform their duty the educational system of the state cannot prevent the production of impractical, inefficient and extravagant young men and women.

Bryan Stands Alone

With the first news of the crisis between the United States and Germany, William Jennings Bryan, before danger-time Secretary of State, and now and always the silver-tongued, pro-peace-at-any-price orator, rushed to Washington with a proposal of a popular referendum on the question of the United States going to war against Germany.

His activity in stirring up anti-patriotic feeling against the President, the plans for maintaining the status in its historical position of honor, liberty and integrity, have attracted attention now on the floor of the National House of Representatives.

Representative Miller of Minnesota, sent a message yesterday from a constituent, saying that "the interests of our country would be conserved by the immediate interment of that said Bryan." Such a thing would be drastic action, but action which would be justified by the results obtainable. Undoubtedly Mr. Bryan can and will do a great deal of harmful work at this period of international crises. Other men, just as humane and pacific as Mr. Bryan himself, have, in this critical hour, offered themselves, their time, their great manufacturing plants, and even their profits, to the government. Mr. Bryan seems to be the black sheep, and it is greatly to be deplored that there are some other sheep which will follow his lead.

Therefore, let him be interned. He stands alone today against the interests of the United States.

The Hunt Bill Unfair.

The so-called Hunt bill has caused a large amount of discussion in the legislature and the state press. We do not understand that Mr. Hunt of Danville, who introduced it, is the champion of the bill. He simply introduced it at the request of some other party. While we wish there were no saloons near any educational institution, we cannot endorse the purpose of this bill. In effect it would say to the towns of Northfield and Middlebury and the city of Burlington, they cannot have local option on the liquor question as the other Vermont towns and cities have. The unfairness of such a proposition is evident.

We have heard of some people saying they would not send their son to the University of Vermont for college training because there were saloons in the city of Burlington. These same people have sent their son to an institution outside the state regardless of whether the town was wet or dry. This was not fair to the state university, and we cannot advocate the passage of an unfair act in an effort to secure the patronage of unfair people. We should be glad to have the use of liquor entirely abolished in educational institutions but we do not feel the enactment of the Hunt bill would insure it.

Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon, who has introduced a bill providing for universal military training makes a good argument in the following statement: "I do not believe in a large standing army. It is contrary to American ideals. But I do believe in an efficient army and a trained citizenry from which an army may be recruited in time of national distress and danger. To be over-prepared is the surest means of maintaining peace, and if the voice of America is to have weight at the council boards of the nations it must have the power to enforce its opinions when this becomes necessary, and in a democracy in the last analysis that voice must be the people's voice and the arm to sustain it must be a body of citizens reasonably well trained to render service when service is required. Legislation along these lines ought to be enacted by Congress at the present session." If war is not declared with Germany this session of congress is not likely to pass the universal training bill but the fairness of requiring every citizen to give a part of his time for the benefit of his nation will finally prevail over the unequal plan for asking a part of the citizens to defend themselves and others.

It is interesting to note that marble and stone work is the largest manufacturing industry in Vermont, the average number of wage earners in that industry being more than twice that in any other. The value of the next largest industry, lumber and timber, was $8,768,453. A close third is the production of butter, cheese and condensed milk, the value of which was $8,695,915. This great amount of butter, cheese and condensed milk is produced without exhausting the natural resources of the state, while lumber and stone are not reproduced as fast as they are used.

The fish and game interests of Vermont have become so great they can no longer be handled by a $1500 or $2000 man. We have lost the best fish and game commissioner the state ever had and the legislature should fix the compensation of that officer high enough so the Governor can go outside of Vermont and secure some former Vermontor big enough to properly fill that responsible position. The sportsmen of the state pay enough revenue in the form of hunting and fishing licenses to pay such a man and the state government should give them such a person.

The average citizen of Canada believes that Germany sees the end and has offended the United States in the hope it will furnish it an excuse to give up the fight. We hope this is true but the disabling of the ships interned in American ports and the destructive work German submarines are doing each day indicates Germany's determination to be as fiendish as possible before it is whipped.

The amendment to the bill requiring lights on all vehicles at night which exempts wagons used for heavy traffic has robbed the bill of its best feature. A team attached to a buggy can dodge out of danger when a heavy team could only begin to get out of the way.

Prepare to plant, produce and prosper.

Reception to Rev. and Mrs. Francis Laird on Their 20th Wedding Anniversary

(Theresa C. Blain, Correspondent.)
The Ladies Aid tendered to our pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Francis Laird, on Friday evening in the village hall, a wedding reception in honor of their 20th anniversary.
